DETAILED ACTION

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Claims 1 and 15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Spencer et al (6,531,107) in view of Merkle (Nanotechnology vol. 11).

The Spencer et al reference teaches a nanoscale device, note entire reference. The nanoscale device is composed of long chain carbon materials of various shapes, note figures. The sole difference between the instant claims and the prior art is the diamondoid material. However, the Merkle reference teaches different diamondoid materials and that diamondoids can be used in nanoscale devices, note page 97. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to modify the Spencer et al reference by the teachings of the Merkle reference to use specific diamondoid materials in order to create strong nanoscale devices.

Claims 2-14 and 16 to 20 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

Response to Applicants' Arguments

Applicant's arguments filed December 28, 2006 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

Applicants' argument concerning the rejection of claims 1 and 15 is noted. The Spencer et al reference does teach the use of nano materials being used in devices. That is all that is required by the claims. Also, the Merkle reference teaches diamondoid materials that are encompassed by the instant claims. The reference teaches the materials as part of a device. Again, this is all that is set forth in the instant claims.

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
